School locker padlocks provide students with the ability to safely and securely leave items within a concealed locker with their own personal padlock. With only the student knowing their combination it ensures only the correct people can gain access. However, what happens if a student injures themselves and needs to leave school? How do you get access to their important items?

That's where the override padlocks are suitable, allowing the students to know the combination but the school to have a master override key for if it is ever required.
